

Yanni Chan lives in Canton, China, and has been a freelance translator for about three years. She believes translation involves more than putting one language into another; it is an important means of cultural exchange. “With a good translation,” she says, “readers can immerse themselves in books taken from a language of which they have no knowledge. My aim is to become a bridge that connects writers and readers from widely varying cultural and linguistic backgrounds.” Her translation credits on Fiberead include: The Fragrance of Surrender: Inspirational Spiritual Fiction and To Date a Man, You Must Understand Yourself: The Journey of Two Women. Yanni is currently co-translating The House of Charles Swinter into Chinese.
